Objective of the project:

Madeira and Isernia are similar in their geographical, social and economic contexts; they share the same reaching difficulties in fact Madeira is an island and Isernia is situated in the southern of Italy, in the central part of Molise Region.

The main objective is to allow our people and, in particular, our students to develop those ICT skills which can be used in the working field in our regions, thus, avoiding a further depopulation of the areas concerned.

The project will aim at identifying the level of ICT skills of the students belonging to both regions.

Our proposal:

At first it will proceed with the analysis and comparison of the Educational Proposal of the two schools regarding the use of ICT.

Then the Chamber of Commerce of Isernia and the Development Society of Madeira will carry out a sample to research and analyse the ICT skills which are mostly demanded by the companies that operate on both regional territories.

Outputs:

On the basis of the results the schools could activate training courses to improve the students' ICT basic competences to achieve the identified needs .
